Empower and develop leaders of character from Latino and other underrepresented communities for the nation in every sector of the global economy

Latino and minority professionals are still missing from corporate leadership. Our Columbia chapter aims to solve this problem. We gather high-achieving students and give them the professional training, mentorship, and career networks they need to succeed after graduation. By supporting our chapter, you gain direct access to a community of driven Columbia students who are ready to excel in finance, consulting, tech, and other major industries.

Who We Are

Since establishing our Columbia chapter in 2023, we have grown into an active organization of students focused on professional excellence and leadership development. We leverage our Latino heritage, bilingual skills, and diverse backgrounds to build a strong community where members actively support one another's career ambitions.

Nationally, ALPFA connects over 100,000 professionals and students. At the campus level, our Columbia chapter focuses on technical preparation, networking, and peer mentorship. Our members consistently secure internships and full-time roles at leading global firms, demonstrating the strength of our talent pool.
As our chapter expands, we are increasing the scale of our professional events, corporate workshops, and mentorship initiatives.

Partnering with ALPFA Columbia gives your firm direct access to high-achieving undergraduate talent. Your sponsorship supports the programming that prepares our members to enter the workforce as capable, high-impact professionals.

Member Snapshot

Our membership includes 82 active undergraduate students across Columbia University and Barnard College. While our junior (11%) and senior (19%) members are ready for immediate hiring, 45% of our chapter consists of first-year students and 25% sophomores, ensuring a multi-year talent pipeline for our sponsors. Additionally, 89% of our members are first-generation college students.

Our members maintain high academic standards and pursue careers across multiple industries:

- Finance: 33%
- Consulting: 17%
- Technology: 14%
- Pre-Medical Tracks: 10%
- Other Sectors: 26%

Because a significant portion of our chapter is in their first or second year, many of our members are actively exploring their career options and are highly receptive to learning about different industries. Sponsoring ALPFA Columbia provides your firm with both immediate recruitment opportunities and early access to a motivated, high-potential talent pool.

Testimonials

Our members have landed internships and full-time roles at leading companies including Goldman Sachs, Guggenheim Partners, PwC, Oliver Wyman, and McKinsey. They have also completed competitive career preparation programs through MLT, SEO, Girls Who Invest, and CareerSpring.

Beyond placements, our core focus is preparing members to enter the professional world with confidence. We teach interview fundamentals, refine stock and business pitches, and help students recognize their own value. When our members feel technically prepared and supported by a strong peer network, they succeed.

Joan Delgadillo | CC ‘29

“ALPFA has provided me a close knit community of like minded people that want nothing but the best for each other and empower one another to succeed! I am proud to be a part of ALPFA as it has given me the confidence in knowing I belong within a community that values my thoughts.”

Sofia Taborda | CC ‘29

“My freshman year of college as a first-generation Latina came with a wave of emotions, from questioning my sense of belonging to doubting my academic potential. ALPFA not only became a home away from home, but also a space where I could confide in others about the challenges I was facing and find comfort, support, and a sense of calm in an otherwise overwhelming environment. I have ALPFA to thank for giving me lifelong mentors, unwavering support, and the confidence I now carry with me every day at Columbia.”

Involvement

Getting involved with ALPFA Columbia looks different for everyone. Whether a student is exploring career paths, building a professional network, or seeking a social community, we provide a structured space for them to grow. Members choose their level of engagement based on their personal and professional goals.

01

GENERAL BODY

Open to all students within the Columbia University system who share our mission. Our 80+ general body members attend corporate recruiting sessions, social events, and foundational professional development workshops. This is the entry point for students discovering our community.

02

ALPFAMILIA

Built for students seeking genuine connection beyond professional development. We host community dinners, team competitions, and wellness events. ALPFAmilia is where our members step away from academic stress, support one another's well-being, and build the lifelong personal networks that sustain them throughout their personal lives and careers.

03

ANALYST PROGRAM

Due to high demand, we are launching an intensive professional training program for underclassmen. Drawing on our members' track record of securing top-tier internships, we offer two distinct tracks: Finance and Technology. Participants gain rigorous interview preparation, practical industry knowledge, and targeted mentorship to compete at the highest level.

04

OPERATING COMMITTEE

The logistical backbone of our events. Committee members work directly with executive board members on event planning, marketing, and corporate relations. In return, they receive priority access to funding for national conventions, exclusive networking opportunities, and priority consideration for future leadership roles.

Over the past year, ALPFA Columbia experienced significant growth: member engagement increased by 18%, our general body expanded by 6%, and we built a network of over 20 professionals committed to mentoring our members. We also shifted toward high-impact programming, hosting recruiting workshops, corporate speaker panels, and structured networking sessions designed to give students direct access to industry insights.

Moving forward, we are scaling these successful initiatives. We are launching our 6-week Finance & Technology Analyst Programs to prepare underclassmen for competitive internship recruiting, pairing the curriculum with a formal mentorship network and strategic corporate events designed to create clear career pathways for our members.

LOOKING FORWARD

Our members possess the academic caliber and drive to succeed, but expanding our impact requires strategic corporate backing. This year, we are focusing on three core initiatives: sponsoring more qualified candidates to attend the ALPFA National Convention, expanding our campus Leadership Summit, and launching our 10-week Analyst Program to prepare underclassmen for recruitment cycles early.

Strategic corporate partnerships will directly fund these initiatives. Your investment allows us to scale our interview preparation workshops, increase our chapter's representation at national networking conventions, and deepen our professional mentorship infrastructure.

We invite you to partner with ALPFA Columbia to support this high-potential talent pool and connect your firm with our university's next generation of leaders.
